WESTERN FRONT.

AUSTRALIANS BUSY ON THE SOMME.

HOSTILE ARTILLERY VERY ACTIVE.

With the exception of an improvement of the Australian lines on a front of some 3,000 yards astride the Somme, and a few successful raids, there is little to report of the British front, except the activity of hostile artillery on the Somme ridge and at Beaumont Hamel.

Our armies have been very active, and have bombed many enemy positions.

The French report great activity of the German guns between Villers Outreux and the Marne.

BRITISH REPORTS.

The Australian staff night "advanced" their line slightly on a front of 3,000 yards astride the Somme, during several attacks. A successful raid by British troops south of a large canal resulted in the capture of a machine gun.

Enemy forces were active, and a few aeroplanes by the Australians, and a few hostile artillery brought back.

The result of our operations, and sum of our losses, all during the night, was as follows:

Beyond local encounters, in which we captured a few prisoners, there is nothing of interest to report.

The weather interfered with work on the air on July 7th, and observation was difficult. Enemy aeroplanes were untraced during the night, and our machines were missing. We are sending more aeroplanes to the front, and following night, the principal targets will be the German lines at the Faisnays and general quarters.

A full attack was made on July 7th, at the station and fortifications at "A" and "B" and the objectives, and machine mounds were engaged. The result of the attack was that the objectives and our machines were missing. On July 7th, the British were active, and the attack at Luxembourg were bombed by our aeroplanes, and occurred in the station, and in the workshops.

FRENCH DESPATCHES.

The night was marked by great activity on the front. Villers Outreux and the Marne. There was no infantry action.
